Endarch: Journal of Black Political Research

Volume 1997
Issue 1 Spring 1997

Fred McBride
Clark Atlanta University

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.auctr.edu/enda

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.auctr.edu/enda/vol1997/iss1/2

This Front Matter is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals of Clark Atlanta University at DigitalCommons@Robert W. Woodruff Library, Atlanta University Center. It has been accepted for inclusion in Endarch: Journal of Black Political Research by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@Robert W. Woodruff Library, Atlanta University Center. For more information, please contact cwiseman@auctr.edu.
ENDARCH
Journal of Black Political Research

Editor: Fred McBride
Associate Editors: Tricia L. Headen
                    Robert Wilkes

Editorial Board

Marvin Johnson       Carlton Usher II
Brian White          Kurt Young

Advisor: Michael Bailey
Advisor: Mack Jones
Chair, CAU Dept. of Political Science: William Boone
Special Assistant: Edith Gray
Cover Design: Barbara Reed

Endarch is a publication of the student body of the Clark Atlanta University Department of Political Science and is published quarterly: Spring, Winter, Summer, Fall, and occasional special issues. The rates are $40 per year for institutions, $20 per year for individuals, $15.00 per year for students and retirees. Individual copies are $6.00 (prices are subject to change). Send subscription and manuscript information to: Endarch, CAU Department of Political Science, James P. Brawley Drive at Fair Street, S.W., Atlanta, Georgia 30314.

Articles published in Endarch do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the editorial board or Clark Atlanta University. Selection and acceptance of articles rests solely with the editorial board but responsibility for views and accuracy of statements contained in articles is the burden of the authors.
Statement of Purpose

In decades characterized by the complete atrophy of all struggle from the sixties and the defection of most of the former participants, the principal question must be...why? What has happened consistently to denature and distort incipiently progressive impulses that appear among black people?

Endarch, as its names would suggest, identifies with motion; not any haphazard or desultory movement, but movement that is conscious of its origins and destinations. As an embodiment of aggregate but mutually consistent perspectives, this journal seeks to reflect, analyze, and generate activity which will ultimately lead toward the expansion, clarification, and solidification of black political thought.

The conscious nature of movement is derived from a clear social and analytic methodology. An approach which views the world as a totality, but also diaphanously understands that the components comprising this world are not of equal importance. With this in mind, and given black peoples historical grounding in oppression and exploitation, Endarch sees of paramount importance those phenomena and groups of phenomena which operate in a system of oppression and exploitation. Recognition of such phenomena must lead to a discernment of those vital elements, the crucial essences of which define and condition the world. Our purpose is to expose those essences and through this explication illuminate the totality from the vantage point of a specific oppressed people. Such is the task of a conscious and critical black political thought imbued with the task of defining the black experience in politics. It is toward this goal that we aim.

Reprint (in part), Endarch, Fall 1974
The Three Crises Of The Negro Intellectual
David Dorsey

Examining President Clinton's Response To Welfare
Robert Wilkes

Strange Bedfellows: The Political Thought of John C. Calhoun And Lani Guinier
Fred McBride